Instead, a separate string was provided for each chromatic note throughout its range. Debussy's response to Pleyel's request was to compose his Danse sacrée et danse profane, which eventually took a place among the best-known and most frequently performed works for harp in the concert repertory. The harp parts are surprisingly conventional ...

Print and download in PDF or MIDI "Danse Macabre". The "Danse Macabre" (Opus 40) was written as a tone poem for orchestra in 1874 by French composer Camille Saint-Saëns. It started out in 1872 as an art song for voice and piano with a French text by the poet Henri Cazalis, which is based in an old French superstition. In 1874, the composer expanded and reworked the piece into a tone poem ...

Harp scoring of chromatic passages is quite complex. A key difference is that in the harp the fingers play directly on the string while there is a mechanism between fingers and strings in the piano (save some extended techniques) which perhaps lends more expressivity to the harp. The piano can sound very mechanic.

Similarly, some of the special techniques associated with the harp had not been developed at that time. Because of this, we will hear no glissandi, no harmonics and very few chords. The solo harp part in this concerto has been likened to a piano part transferred straight from the keyboard to the harp, and there is some justice in this description.

Adagio for Strings Samuel Barber (1910-81) In common with Aaron Copland's 'Fanfare for the Common Man', Samuel Barber's hugely popular 'Adagio for Strings' is closely associated with America and things American. It lies among the natural choices of music for sad and reflective occasions, vying in solemnity with 'Nimrod' from Sir Edward Elgar's 'Enigma Variations'.
