They have let an enormous gap grow between God's word and the Christian life style. "So why didn't they tell me that in church", is a, "means of beginning" to close the gap. This is not a book you read from cover to cover and set on the shelf as another trophy to the multitude of dust collectors in your den.

So why do people who were born years after the war seriously seem to think that they fought the thing? The charitable explanation is that they grew up in its shadow - living with rationing, playing on bomb sites, with war stories inescapable on film and TV - and so even though they didn't live through the war, it still coloured their ...

Today's 75-year-olds didn't fight the war - so why do we ...

Could the eagles have flown Frodo into Mordor? I probably wrote this page around 2000. At least, it must have been some point before Usenet was a complete ruin. Feel free to write to me about this if you want to argue about it or can think of additional points. But, please do read the article first.

Because they are a long way from safe places to move them to. My sister lost her 58' yesterday because they could not move it to a safe harbor. The waters were very rough early and most of these boats move at 12 knots. That wont get you out of the way of such a mammoth storm. The marinas used hurricane straps and the boat owners used ratchet...
